MEXICO NUMBER

This book is gratefully dedicated to the memory of Richard Priess.

The artist in him touched the Beacon and beauty lived in its pages.

His indomitable enthusiasm touched the spirit of boys and girls and life to them became a high adventure.

IN MEXICO

WHEN THE AZTECS ruled in Mexico, they built this temple to their gods. It probably took millions of slaves to build the great temple and the ponderous walls. When one considers that the stone steps, the huge sections of stone in the wall all had to be carried by human hands, no one knows how far, one reflects that it did not pay to try to escape taxes in America's earlier days. The slaves were those who did not pay taxes, as well as the prisoners of war.

Over the middle entrance there is an interesting variation of the swastika. To the Indian this meant good luck, but if he had an enemy, he merely drew the swastika reversed on something the unfortunate man possessed—and felt assured that bad luck would be with that man!

There are numerous places in Mexico and Central America where there are ruins of buildings in this fine ancient style of architecture. They have interesting geometric designs on the walls, each with its own story perhaps. They were the motif for the decorations on this and other pages of this number of The Beacon. The Spaniards destroyed these temples and later built their churches often on the same site. This picture shows in the background such a church of later Spanish Mexican style, with domes. In the ancient building the roofs were flat.

Ruins at Mitla, Oaxaca

THE SPANISH conquerors of the New World were much like the crusaders in spirit, for they vanquished the native races of America in the name of God, and strove to conquer the heathen under the banner of the cross. The Spaniards, fired with zeal of conquest, destroyed temples, demolished idols, and razed pyramids which had taken centuries for completion. A reconstruction period followed in which the passion for erecting churches, convents, schools, colleges, and priestly residences replaced the one for destruction that had been so predominant in the first quarter of a century just after the conquest. Architects from Spain, and native master builders, were employed to work under direction of the priests. The architecture of this first colonial period was greatly affected by Indian ideas, since the workmen were all natives, who were left to a large extent to work out their own ideas, due to the fact that the Spaniards and Indians could not converse in a common language.

These earlier structures are a curious admixture of Gothic, Renaissance, Moorish and native American styles. They are plain and unpretentious when compared with those that followed, but dignified and interesting. About them still clings that mysterious atmosphere that the Indian workman gave to all he touched in the years following the conquest when his ancient traditions were still vividly alive.

San Augustin Acolman

INTO MEXICO, after the conquest, came missionaries, and spread all over the land and into what is now Southern California. The Franciscans were the first to offer themselves for the work, beginning with three from Flanders, and "twelve Apostles of Mexico" from Spain. They established centers of life and teaching, monasteries with churches and workshops, called "missions." Many are still standing, more or less in ruins. Later on, churches were built in towns and cities. This is a fine one, with its sturdy bell tower and domed roof. The steps, up which millions of men have walked—homesick to hear of the god of the "old country," or curious to hear of this strange new god—curve invitingly to shelter the little white shrine at one side. There are odd contrasts; the little shrine is classic in detail, while the round beams protruding from the wall at the left, are like those in Indian pueblos. The wave-like line at the top of the wall is characteristic. The bells are sometimes hung as in this well proportioned bell tower, and sometimes in belfries on the top of a wall. Spanish architecture was influenced by the Moors and Arabs; and the Moorish dome, often decorated with colored tiles, appeared to the Indian artists and builders after the conquest. They adopted it with fervor, and domes are seen everywhere in Mexico. Nearly every church has, besides its own majestic dome, one or more domed chapels closely attached to it. Even in remote places a dome peers over a hill or nestles in a valley; another touch of the Orient in our western world.

These churches stand as brave monuments to a group of Spanish friars who determined to convert a nation.

Church of Amecameca

If you were in an airplane over Puebla you would see plainly the courtyards, called patios, without which no Mexican home is complete. Many buildings have few windows on the outside and the single door leads directly to the patio. From the patio you may gain admittance through the arcades into the interior. Some patios have fountains, bird baths, shrubs, flowers and trees; others are paved and bare or have green things growing in tubs or pots which are moved at need. The large patio in the lower left corner of this picture looks like a basket ball court; in the original photograph circles and lines seem to show on the pavement. Perhaps this building is a school. How would you like to sit in the balcony under the arches and watch a game? Some of the courtyards are lighted by electric lights; there are a few electric signs, and some trolley cars. Not many automobiles; where would they park? Most of the streets are narrow and the sidewalks narrower. But the Mexicans, a warm climate people, love the sun far too much to shut it off their streets and gardens and highways, so Puebla has mostly low flat buildings of a rather even height, the level broken here and there by the domes and bell towers of the churches, the tall palms of the patios and by fluttering windmills. The streets of most Mexican towns are quite irregular; but Puebla was built after the conquest and is said to have been laid out by a famous Spanish architect.

We do not see in this picture, horse drawn vehicles, or the oxen and "burros" so common in the villages. In Mexico at one time it was all the old, now it is the old and the new. Will the new prevail? Will the romance of the quaint old places be lost forever?

Puebla from the Air

WID DARK-EYED SENORITAS stroll in this old patio once." My imagination dwells about this refreshing courtyard, a square white marble garden of enticing pattern, open to the bright sun. Over one corner is draped a gay colored canopy which coaxes in the breeze and yet protects the house from summer heat. Tile floored rooms connect with the picturesque old galleries around the open space. Here, in this pleasant atmosphere of moss covered walls and ancient bronze gates, in this nook where birds twitter among tropical plants and a soft tinkle of water plays in the Spanish-tiled fountain, I dream.

These patios have a history centuries old. They began far back in biblical days. Athens and Rome patterned their dwellings so. In them fierce Moors and Arabs jealously protected and guarded their veiled harems. Spain brought them across the blue seas into a new, yet old-world Mexico.

The ancient tiles of lovely glaze and color tell another story, of glistening walls and courts, soft tread of feet and mezzuin call to prayer.

I dream, and know that hidden gardens are no tellers-of-tales other than these. The tiled set windows will keep many a secret, treasured as decades roll by, setting dust, and my secluded patio will hold its peace.

An Old Patio in Acapulco

THE STREETS are one of the peculiar sights of the Mexican town. They are narrow, and of firmly packed earth, the firmness aided by the steady tramp of donkeys that carry much wheat, woodchoppings, water casques or skins, or human riders. The streets are often steep, with frequent and abrupt turns. The view from a higher level is fascinating as there are trees with a great deal of foliage near their tops, that add a colorful note to the picture, appearing in groups among the stuccoed houses of varied tints.

The houses are seldom over one story in height but the main floor is ten to fifteen feet above the street. In this case the name 'street' must be used for there are no sidewalks such as are found even in villages in the United States. Stairs lead up to the door which often has huge hinges beautifully wrought out of metal. Heavy wood balustrades are often artistically carved in forms different from those we see at home. Lacy iron grills are also much used as ornament.

In the houses is usually found a number of clay objects set attractively about. The painting on them is interesting, usually following a true flower study. A common design is the stump of a tree with a spray of wild flowers draped about it but in no particular fashion. The real flowers may be seen growing on the outskirts of the cities, in the very palest colors. Real flowers too are found growing in the molded pottery that is made by native artists. The true Mexican woman has at least three or four pots with these beautifully tinted flowers.

A Street in Taxco, Guerrero

LONG AGO, when the Spanish conquerors denied the Indians even the smallest plot of ground without the harshest of taxes, the ingenious Indians devised a plan to outwit their oppressors and earn their living. They bound young trees together to make rafts and covered these with rich river earth. On these they grew a wealth of flowers as well as the more practical vegetables and grain that furnished them food. Sometimes these rafts were large enough to permit trees to grow on them.

In the background is a mountain called El Popocatepetl, which, according to a popular Indian myth, has a wife, another mountain which they call Sleeping Woman. When El Popocatepetl, which means Smoking Prince, sends forth his clouds of smoke, the natives say he is angry with his wife.

Mexico

Many of us think of Mexico as a land of strife and revolt. It is true there were many presidents and different rulers, but as a whole the turmoil has been exaggerated.

The first inhabitants of Mexico were the Aztecs and the Toltecs. These Indians were much advanced in civilization. It is thought by many of the leading authorities that the Aztecs came across the Bering Strait from Asia and migrated southward. Many authors are of the opinion that the Aztecs may have been the Mound Builders of the Mississippi Valley who, after building these mounds, were driven southward into Mexico by the more barbaric tribes. It was discovered by scientists that the Toltecs had a solar year which was more accurate than that of the Romans. At the time of the Spanish Conquest many valuable relics and records of these peoples were destroyed. The buildings and pyramids resemble very closely those of Egypt.

The scenery of Mexico rivals that of any country, and the climate as a whole is quite comfortable. Along the coast there are hot lowlands, but toward the interior there is a belt in which the climate closely resembles our own. On the high mountain plateaus the climate is much like that of Canada. These varied climates enable the inhabitants to raise a great variety of fruits and vegetables. In the lowlands there are great forests of mahogany, ebony, and rosewood. These forests are of great value, but are being wasted. In the interior belt the richness of the soil enables the growth of twenty-two times as much wheat as is sown, while in France the growth is only six times the amount sown.

Most of the work is done by the peons. These people are little better off than slaves. An early law freed these people, but the superior wits of the better class keeps them in subjection. The wages paid the peons by their employers are incredibly low. For a hard day's work they receive from twenty-five to thirty cents. The only store near the hacienda, where the peons work, is the storehouse of the hacienda. Because of low wages, the peons are constantly in debt to their employers, and they must work for him without pay to offset the debt. Many states have compulsory education, and this, we hope, will free them from their sad plight.

North America's Oldest Metropolis

Mexico City is an astonishing place. In modern, superficial aspects it is not unlike some other Latin-American capitals. It has old palaces, parks, paintings, and libraries, colleges, convents, great newspapers, and broadcasting stations. You can sit in one of its theaters and watch a "newsreel"; swim, dance, and play golf or tennis at a club, and—except that you hear Spanish instead of Yankee chatter—you might as well be in Denver.

But under all this standardized modernism is much more—a blend of Spanish and Aztec forces that goes back 400 years. You see it, in no less than three-cornered Aztec faces moving stolidly in street crowds. Probe the mystic past and you find that certain immortal, historic events staged here swayed the destiny of our continent for centuries. Here, among pagan pyramids, Christianity obtained its first foothold in North America, when idols were turned into altars and a glittering but cruel pagan culture yielded stubbornly to European civilization. Here the continent's first sheet music and first book were published. Here its first money was coined. And here, too, appeared the first newspaper. Cortez, that great conqueror and explorer built the first sugar mill, not far from Mexico City, and his men introduced many domestic animals, fowls, and farm methods new to the Aztecs. In fact, the coming of Cortez set in motion economic and other forces that to this day are felt, from California to Panama.

ROBERT RAWIZZA.

Aztecs

The Toltecs were a race of people that lived in Mexico long ago. No written history has been left by these people but there has been enough evidence found to prove that they were civilized. They were agriculturalists, mechanical artists, and metal workers. Many beautiful monuments have been found that were made by these industrious people. One very interesting piece of work that has been preserved is their perfect calendar stone.

After four centuries of living thus, the people were wiped out by famine, pestilence, and wars. Those few that were left migrated to Central America. About one hundred years later the Chickamecs entered the land followed by the Aztecs and Tezcucans. These tribes were also civilized and had an absolute government. They are remembered for having a splendid judicial system. They believed in capital punishment and formal marriages and they encouraged slavery. They had tax collectors who went from house to house collecting funds. Brilliantly dressed soldiers paraded the streets and proper respect was shown to the ruler at all times.

A most excellent means of communication was carried on by these people. A message could travel sometimes more than two hundred miles a day. There were post houses along the road at certain intervals and couriers, the swiftest of the men, ran from one post house to another where the message was handed to a waiting man.

The deity of the Aztecs was the god of war. They loved fighting and participated in many wars. They also had a hospital system for the sick and disabled soldiers.

The Aztecs are gone—but they have left many traces and many art works for which the world admires them.

MILDRED HENRY

Geography of Mexico

Mexico, a republic in North America, lies between 33° and 15° North latitude, and 87° and 117° West longitude. It is bounded on the north by the United States (California, Arizona, and New Mexico), on the east by Texas and the Gulf of Mexico; on the west by the Pacific Ocean, and on the south by Guatemala and the British Honduras. Mexico's coastline of about 5800 miles has very few harbors, many headlands, and two peninsulas, Lower California and Yucatan.

Most of the surface of Mexico is a large triangular plateau at an elevation of 4000 to 8000 feet, bounded by mountain ranges on the east and west. The mountain range on the west is called Sierra Madre Occidental, and that on the east is called Sierra Madre Oriental. The highest elevations in these two mountain ranges are from 12,000 to 18,000 feet. The center of the plateau is volcanic in character, some of the volcanoes being over 17,000 feet high. The valley of Mexico, which formerly contained many salt lakes, is situated in the center of the plateau, between the sixteenth and twentieth degrees North latitude.

Mexico has a variety of industries because of the differences in climate and soil. In the north the chief industry is cattle raising, in the south is the cereal region, the Gulf slope is suitable for tropical agriculture and it is well irrigated from the mountains, and Yucatan is only good for producing hemp.

Mexico's rivers are small, most of them being mountain streams. The Rio Del Norte is the largest and large vessels can only come a few miles above its port of Matamoras. Some more of the most important rivers are the Rio Grande Santiago, the Rio de la Balsas, and the Yaqui.

Mexico, because of its different elevations, has a great variety of climates. The coast zone, called the tierra templada zone, which rises to an elevation of 5,577 feet, has a sub-tropic temperature; the tierra fria zone, which includes the highest elevations, has a temperature corresponding to that of the United States. Mexico City, the largest city in Mexico, with a population of over a million inhabitants, is 7,000 feet above sea level and is cooler than New York or Chicago in summer.

Mexico ranks third among Latin American countries in area and in population, being three fourths the size of Argentina, and one fourth the size of Brazil. It has a total area of 767,326 square miles, which is about three times the size of Texas.

WILLIAM BYRNE.

Some Mexican Industries

Have we ever stopped to think where the millions and millions of feet of rope come from? Probably not. This is just one of the many industries of Mexico. A plant, resembling the common century plant, is gathered from the grainfields of Mexico's highlands. Its name is henequen fiber. The thorns have proved useful for pins and needles or for a tool with which the Indians pierce the tongue or the ears for punishment. A drink is made from the sap, and the tall stalks furnish materials for the huts. Rope, twine, and cloth is made from this fiber, as well as a paper on which they record any special event. Yucatan has become the chief center for this occupation.

In the highland regions we find the reason for calling Mexico the treasure house of the world. There are more than twenty-seven thousand mines of gold, silver, precious stones, such as emeralds, agates, turquoise, opals, and crystals, in addition to one thousand copper mines. For years Mexico was the greatest silver producer of the world and today it is surpassed only by the United States.

EXHIBITION

Mexico seems to be partly responsible for the world riding on air, for at present she has wonderful rubber-producing areas. There is quite a difference between the rubber plant of Brazil and that of Mexico, the Mexican plant being called guayule.

This plant which grows from one to three feet high covers the entire northern part of the country. It is gathered up by natives and pressed into bales. It is then hauled to the railroad station by mules from whence it is taken by train to the factory where the rubber is extracted.

Another important industry is the growing of chicle from which chewing gum is made. The process of gathering chicle is similar to that of securing maple syrup from the trees. The sap which has the appearance of milk is collected and carried to the boiling sheds. It is then boiled in huge kettles until the water evaporates and pure gum remains. Then it is shaped into uneven loaves and shipped by mules or oxen to the railroad station. The United States is the highest bidder for this export.

Thus Mexico seems to have a promising future. With her variety of climate she can produce everything required for the life of man. Her mineral wealth is enormous and her producing ability is only a small part of what we may expect from her in the future.

EUGENE JOLY

The Real Mexico

The real Mexico is a beautiful country, composed of a mountainous plateau that is partly desert and partly agricultural land. The delightful climate and beautiful scenery, the sincerity with which the Mexican people greet visitors, and the old Spanish customs, make it an ideal place for rest and relaxation.

Approximately four hundred years ago the Spaniards under Cortez landed in Mexico and found it peopled with Indians. These Spaniards crushed the Aztecs and ruled them for three hundred years. Then Mexico revolted and after a long war gained her independence.

Today an observing visitor will find the country he believes backward very much improved in refinement and education. They have established schools and the people are becoming more cultured.

The coast line of Mexico helps commerce. The main trading is carried on with the United States. Petroleum, minerals, sugar, cotton, and coffee are exported.

The population of modern Mexico is composed of Spanish people and Indians and the progeny of their intermarriage, and the Spanish language is the official language.

The land of the fiesta, Modern Mexico, is improving rapidly.

ANITA DOERFLER.

The Santa Maria Tule Tree

The sacred tree stands in Santa Maria del Tule, a small town, full of trees and flowers, very beautifully located on the main road between the city of Oaxaca and the town of Tlaxiuhco. Originally the name of the town was simply Tule—"place of bullrushes"—and it lies in the heart of a valley of the same name, Santa Maria del Tule, famous for its fertility.

Great and magnificent tropical forests cluster about the base of the mountains enclosing the valley, and it is an interesting fact that the inhabitants of this region, which include fifteen distinct Indian tribes, all believed in ancient times that they were either born or descended from trees.

The Mextecs, up to the time of the coming of the Spaniards, venerated and actually preserved two trees which they had been taught to believe were their parents, and one of the first acts of the Spanish conquerors upon their arrival in the State of Oaxaca was to fell and burn these two trees. One of these was a pine tree and the other a kind of willow, representing the male and female elements of reproduction. The original inhabitants worshiped beneath these trees up to the early years of the sixteenth century, also in many caves scattered about the state, the entrances to which were invariably guarded by two trees, one on either side.

One of the main places of worship and one of the chief objects of worship of the Zapotecs was the Santa Maria Tule tree. Its symbolism is feminine, and believers, after going through a kind of purification there, passed on to Mitla, where the ceremonies were continued until finally a complete purification was accomplished.

CONCESSION

This gigantic cypress, which species of tree was known to the Aztecs as Anuecueta, is between 150 and 160 feet high, and 4 feet from the ground the trunk measures 16 feet in circumference. Twenty-eight persons without stretched arms and fingertips touching, are barely able to encircle it. The spread of the branches is 140 feet, and it is supposed to have stood there for ten centuries before Columbus began his voyage to America. Hernando Cortes and his troops on the march from Mexico to Honduras nearly four hundred years ago, sheltered beneath it, and at that time its tremendous bulk commanded the admiration of the Spaniards.

In point of size, the Tule tree closely resembles the great Banyan in the botanical garden at Calcutta. In appearance, it looks as if there had been several trunks growing together, but such is not the case. The bark has strong medicinal properties, and, the wood of the tree furnishes a resin, used in cases of rheumatism.

It is generally believed that this tree is some fifteen centuries old—the "oldest inhabitants" stating that their forebears knew nothing concerning its age, and that it has always existed, and that since time immemorial it has been an object of worship.

A notice posted on the tree, warning the traveler against mutilating it, seems entirely unnecessary, in view of the fact that there is never wanting a guardian in the form of an Indian, whose function is to ward off intruders from the tree itself and the ground immediately beneath it, both of which are considered today as holy by all Indian tribes.

Mystic ceremonies and strange, weird rites are performed beneath its spreading branches, the neglect of which would, in the firm conviction of believers, be attended by disastrous consequences to them personally, and to the crops and general welfare of the people. The large tree is at the side of the church in the Churchyard, and nearby is a smaller one which the Indians believe to be the hijo (son) of the big tree.

Under the auspices of the Secretary of Education, Senor Jose Vasconcelos, a report was published in 1923, wherein it was estimated that some thousand or more people from various parts of the country visited the great tree of Tule every month, and the "tree-worshippers" of the Indian tribes, scattered in various parts of the Republic, were in the habit of making a pilgrimage to it twice yearly, at Easter and at Christmas.

The Ambition of Santa Anna

Mexico is a land of revolutions and it is no great wonder that she produced such an ambitious and able general as Santa Anna. He joined the army when a boy, and because internal skirmishes were continually being fought in the land of the ancient Aztecs, he soon acquired a sufficient knowledge of civil warfare to support his ambition, the desire to rule his native land. Like Napoleon, he hoped that his country might grow in power and wealth so that he might be elevated in the eyes of its people.

He possessed enough of that cruelty so prevalent in noble Spanish blood to make him an excellent military leader. Because of his knowledge of warfare and his cunning in military tactics, he was respected by the Mexican people as well as by his own soldiers. Moreover, he was an eloquent speaker and when exiled by the government of his fatherland, he delivered a flowery speech as a farewell address, leaving in the minds of the people an impression of the sacrifices he had made for their safety which they could not forget. And when the government was being oppressed by a foreign enemy, the public called him back from exile and appointed him to lead their forces against the enemy because they knew that he was the ablest soldier in Mexico, and if there was any salvation from their foes, it was to be through Santa Anna.

He realized his personal ambition by being President of Mexico several times, and by making himself dictator of all Mexico until his death with the right to appoint his successor. But the Mexican people later turned against him, and with the attitude of a martyr he went into voluntary exile.

ROLLAND STEVENS

A Mexican Love Affair

"Playing the bear" is quite an unusual form of courtship prevalent in Mexico. The young man is unable to speak to the girl of his affections personally, so he will stand beneath her window or some distance from her home and lift fervent glances in her direction. The girl usually does not make an appearance, but in all probability she is behind the curtain making up her mind whether or not he is her choice of bear. If he is, she generally will find some way of encouraging him, as a wave of the hand, a smile, or a blown kiss. Sometimes such a flirtation will reach the love-letter stage, servants or tradespeople being bribed to deliver the notes.

If the parents disapprove, the girl is usually kept out of sight; but if the parents approve, the lovers may then talk to each other from the balcony.

Before a bear can propose marriage he must interview the girl's parents. After a conventional period, accompanied by a friendly sponsor, he calls on the father formally and proposes marriage. If he is an eligible suitor, they then consult the girl's inclinations. She will probably say that she will have to meet the prospective bridegroom—after months, perhaps years of evenings on the balcony. When the bear is permitted to meet his winsome lady without secrecy, every member of the family and even the servants may witness his adoption as "son-in-law elect." Even then, however, he never has the advantage of a tete-a-tete with his fiancée, for when he wishes to take his sweetheart to the theater he must entertain the whole family as well.

When the fatal time arrives, the unfortunate bear must not only pay for the furniture of the new home, but he is expected to give the bride her trousseau.

There are in Mexico two wedding ceremonies, the civil and religious, the latter taking place at church, while the former is a contract made before the judge in the presence of six witnesses.

After the marriage, the wife uses her husband's name as well as her own. Senorita Garcia, who marries Senor Fernandez, thus becomes Senora Garcia de Fernandez.

IRENE BUESCHEL.

Mexico at Play

All nations have their individual forms of play and Mexico is no exception. In all parts of Mexico there is a tendency toward festivity, although this festivity is regarded more as a spectacle than as an event in which each individual participates. Chief among the celebrations are those of a religious nature. At one time there were seventy-nine religious holidays, but now they are limited to seven. These include Easter, Corpus Christi, and Christmas. Christmas in Mexico is celebrated for nine days, the ninth being Christmas Eve. The nine day celebration is in memory of the nine day journey of Joseph and Mary to Bethlehem.

Besides the formal fiestas and feast days there are various other forms of recreation, among which are bullfights, cockfights, and gambling.

Mexicans are fond of milder forms of amusement, too, among which is the promenade. Mexicans find a great deal of pleasure in walks and rides, chiefly on Sunday morning.

The theater has always ranked high in the Mexican category of amusements and magnificent theaters have been erected in almost every important city. In the days of Diaz excellent operas were given and although similar efforts have been made recently none approached the seasons previous to 1911. Perhaps the most popular theatrical entertainments are the zarzuelas, Spanish one act farces. The actors are usually Spanish or native. Moving picture theaters, too, have sprung up. French and Italian films are the most popular, although American films are also shown.

Athletics as recreation have not been taken to very kindly by the Mexican, as most games are too strenuous for the climate. Baseball nevertheless, is now becoming popular and football, too, has been recognized. They are now trying to build up athletics in Mexico, and encouraging participation in them. For the most part, Mexicans enter recreations purely for pleasure and fun, rather than for any good which might be derived from them.

Bull Fighting in Mexico

Present-day Mexico has retained practically all of the customs of Mexico under Spain. One of the "Old Spanish Customs" still found in Mexico is bull-fighting. There is something fascinating about this sport. It may be the dashing courage and bravo of the toreros, the triumph of man over brute strength, the variety and novelty of the performance; at any rate this unusual sport attracts thousands of tourists each year.

The Mexican bull rings surpass those of Spain in size and magnificence. The bull ring is circular and may seat as many as 20,000 persons. One side of the amphitheatre is in the sun while the other is in the shade. A higher class of Mexicans is found on the shady side where the seats are more expensive.

The Mexican audience is a critical one. It will applaud a brave torero with cheers and jeer a cowardly one with trait. The audience is not only critical of the fighters but also of the bulls. If the bulls do not display a fighting spirit, they too are the targets of missiles. If a large percentage of the bulls on any one day's bill proves cowardly, the fight is stopped, the patrons are refunded their money and the owner of the bulls is fined a large sum of money by the government for disappointing the public.

Great care is taken in the selection of bulls in order to avoid this disappointment of the customers. The breeding of bulls for fighting purposes is a profitable business. One thousand dollars is sometimes paid for a good fighting bull.

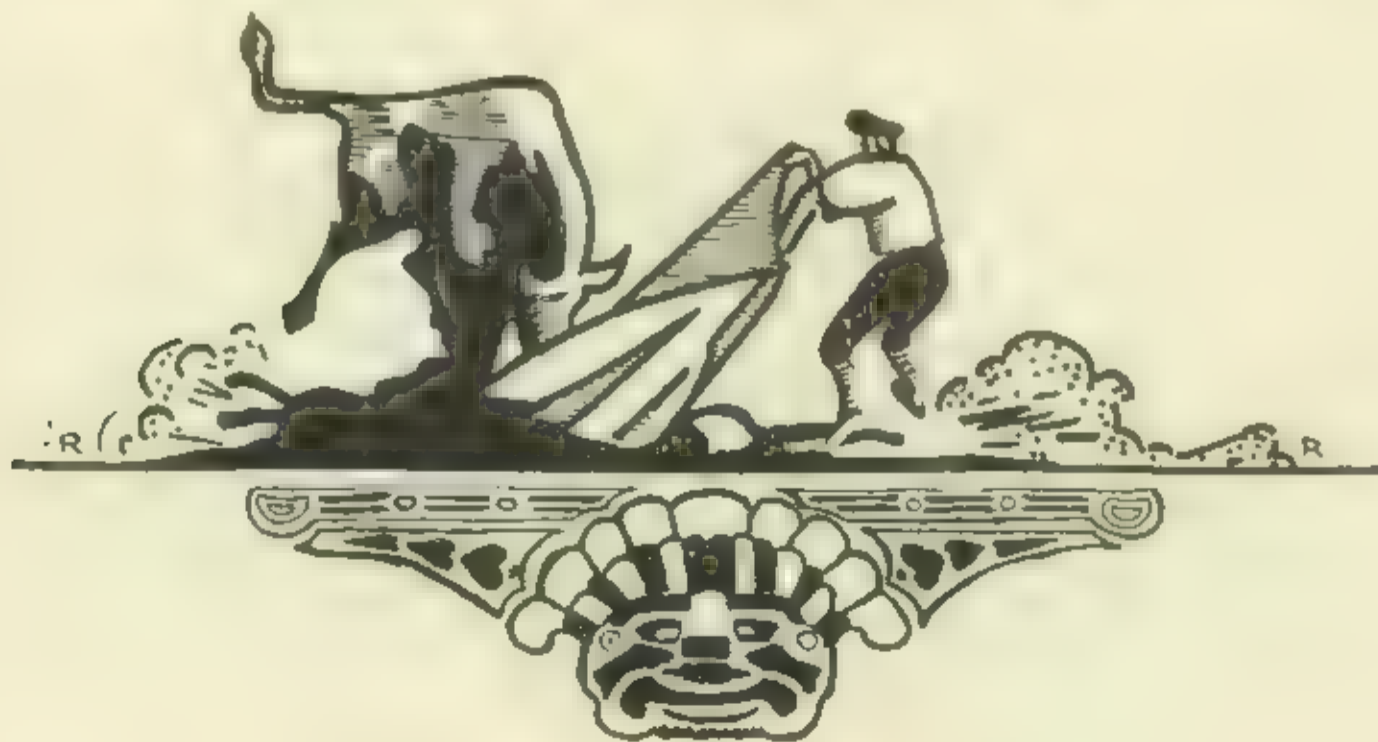

The Matador ranks highest among bull fighters. His risk is the greatest, his task is the hardest but his reward is the handsomest, too. The Matador gets about a thousand dollars a performance out of which he pays his company, consisting of the Banderillero, the Picador, and a few servants. Several different companies take part in a performance.

Bull fighters have the admiration of Mexicans, just as "Babe Ruth" has the admiration of Americans. They have write-ups in the newspapers and they are the most talked about individuals in Mexico. The dress of a bull fighter seldom varies. He wears a short, squat, broad-brimmed black hat, an embroidered velvet vest that does not meet the velvet trousers, and a red cloth belt, one end of which hangs down on one side. The vests of many toreros are bedecked with jewels and costly lace.

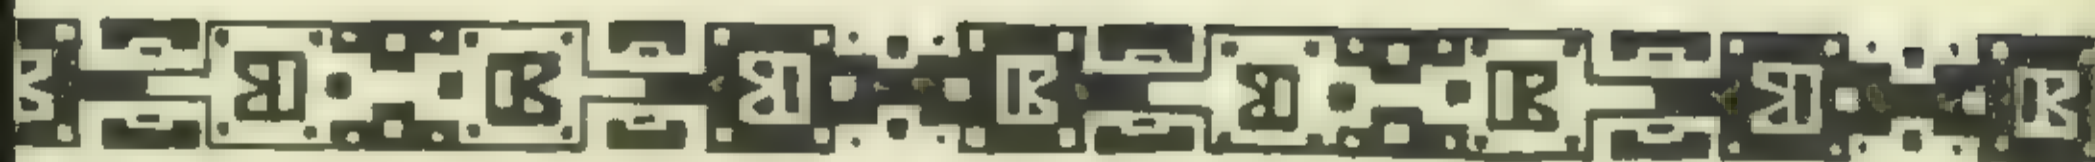

The yearly kill of a torero ranges from 100 to 200 bulls. Horses are used in one form of bull-fighting and they are used in such a way that their being gored to death is inevitable, indeed, this is a set part of the performance. On the average eight bulls and ten horses are killed in an afternoon. The toreros themselves are not infrequently killed. The killing of a torero may be expected at any time and on any occasion.

Bull fighting with its cruelty, thrills and color has furnished Mexicans with recreation and entertainment for many centuries; but due to the increasing popularity of baseball and other American sports which are taking root in Mexico, this ancient sport seems destined gradually to disappear.

Mexico

Viva, proud Mexico!
Long fly your flag.

Land of the Aztecs old,
Land of the Spaniards bold,
Land where men died for gold.

Viva, proud Mexico!
Long fly your flag.

Memories

*I think in vain of those days, Raquel,
When we were both together
'Neath skies of Mexico, Raquel,
Regardless of time or weather.
All was so blue above us, Raquel,
There wasn't a cloud in the sky—
The birds seemed to sing 'cause they loved us,
And we were so happy, just you and I.
But that is all past and gone, Raquel,
Tho' I wish for it more and more,
Since the day that we whispered 'goodbye', Raquel*

*Down on the Rio shore.
The days are all dismal here, Raquel,
The skies are all cloudy and grey.
I long to come back,—back to you, Raquel,
For just one more happy day.
I miss the song of the birds, Raquel,
I want Mexico and you.
I hope that you think of me, Raquel,
And dream the same dreams that I do.*

At the Bullfight

*A creamy lace mantilla,
A lovely sleek black head,
Both adorned most prettily,
With roses, crimson red.
Two large black eyes of innocence
Look at you from a face
So lovely, unbelievable,
Filled with a charming grace,
Two small red lips which parted now
Call out for more and more.
As this young maid of Mexico
Cheers on her matador.*

Paradise Row

*I thought you'd understand, . . . and so
I brought you to my Paradise Row,
But you—you looked around and said,
"You told me Paradise; instead
I see a sleepy dusty street
Where paths are worn by many feet,
Paradise Row! And here I see
An empty home reach out to me—
A wistful home, deserted quite,
Its vacant eyes bereft of sight,
Stretching forth its arms in pain
To call its loved ones back again.
Paradise Row! The naked trees
Reach grotesque arms to catch the breeze,
And boisterous children 'round their feet
All shout and laughingly compete
In many games, wires overhead
Entangle the skies—and yet you said
That this was the place you loved to go—
And you call this your lovely Paradise Row "*

*This is the place; ignore the dust,
Ignore the little home's moldering rust;
Ignore the wires and the laughing play,—
Here is peace at the end of day.
In the little home glide to and fro
The gentle ghosts of long ago;
Though fences sag and the eaves are bent,
Enter, and find serene content.
Through all the wires and the tangled nets
Of crippled boughs the sunset lets
Fantastic figures pattern the grass
That never an artist can surpass.
There's a tiny patter of long-dead feet
That have scuffled the dust in the sleepy street.
My rendezvous with long ago—
Wistful, dreamy, Paradise Row.*

Poplar

*All day long you swayed and swayed—
Tensely, dramatically,
Mobile as the very wind
—Marquise of the plains in rustling gown.*

*Then. . . one night I saw the warm new sliver of a moon
Cradled in your slender arms;
Saw it glowing in your boughs
Like some strange new fruit;
Saw you quiver with a joy that the day could not define.
Then silently, thoughtlessly,
The moon-child fled from your tender breast
And the sky reflected her youthful glamour.
But you stretched empty arms to her—
An agonized exclamation point.*

*This morning you were dancing—
Slimly, lithely.
But—you knew that I knew
And you begrudged me my knowledge.*

MOLLY HARDY.

The Violet

*A colour—deep as Death's undertaking,
A fragrance—rare as an Angel's breath.
Petals—smooth as a new day's breaking,
The violet.*

ANNA GEHL.

A Woodland Scene

*A shimm'ring brooklet ripples along,
Singing a gayly melodious song,
Trees sway
Diffusing the sunlight's piercing ray.*

*The spreading ferns along the bank
Bedeck the brooklet's flowered flank.
Thru cooling shade
The breezes soft sweep up the glade.*

*The woodland's magic silence quells
All cares, I gaze into the brooklet's wells
And brood—
In the woodland's soothing solitude.*

FRANK McLAUGHLIN.

Moon Madness

Last night—

*I gathered milky manna from the sky
I had been hungry so long!
Stretching out my hand to a gallant cobweb lover,
Together we tore night's filmy curtain—
Kissing sleepy starlet's faces,
Skimming planets in our flight.
The winds were not so swift as we!
Finally, breathless we stopped
He, ardent sun-lover, to go back.
Go back? I turned on him and smote him—
Slew him with my flaming scimitar.
Men who saw my face were blinded,
Blinded by the light of my rapt, glowing face.
Even those who slept
Where my burning gaze could fathom
Met the sun reluctantly,
Found the day insipid*

MOLLY HARDY.

Song

*Oh, thread me a harp with shining strings,
The soft gray threads of rain;
And make my harp of the lilac wood,
And I'll strum a sad refrain. . .*

*Oh, make me flute of the cherry tree,
Mounted with bits of the moon;
And if it be carved in the blossom time
I'll pipe you a merry tune. . .*

*But fashion a shining violin
Of a pine tree, slim and tall;
And I'll play on its cobweb strings of dawn
The sweetest song of all.*

MOLLY HARDY

Whims

*I am young—so young that I go on, tireless—
A-singing of life as I'd have it sung—
Singing of fame and of wealth and of glory.
I'm joyously, gayly, merrily young.*

*I am old—so old I am wise as Age.
My wisdom is rarer than purest gold—
I know of the stars and the secrets of man.
I am gravely, serenely, calmly old.*

*I am old—I am young. I am staid—I am gay.
I'm everything now, but I'm nothing I see.
I am wistfully merry, I'm joyously sad.
I am old—I am not! I am naught but a dream.*

MOLLY HARDY.

The Treasure Hunt

*I'm not the fearful pirate bold,
The one of whom bad tales are told,
I seek for more than sentiments,
I seek the keys of eminence.*

*These learned lesson-books, you see,
Make every pirate shout with glee:
They are the worthy hunted prize,
Always welcomed by the wise.*

*They hold Widsom's Golden Keys,
The sayings of celebrities,
The highest honors of success
Are contents of my treasure chest.*

LORRAINE YAEGER.

The Tin Soldier

*Forward!
Over the whole country
Filled with hope of victory
Forward proud and brave you march,
Lighted by an unknown torch.*

*Homeward
At last you're turned;
And what a lesson you have learned!
There is no other one, you see,
To take your place 'neath the Christmas tree*

LORRAINE YAEGER

Comparisons

*Oh, happy! happy!
 Little things, you know little of this life,
 Cheerful and content.
 You have no books to borrow or to lend
 Adorable and sweet!
 You fear not the starch or other food
 You eat.
 Oh, charming life!
 You have no constant battles with
 Your wife.
 Chattering gayly the whole day long,
 A bird's life is pure and sunny,
 Man's life is just like a pointed tong,
 Ever reaching greedily for money.*

LORRAINE YAEGER.

Elegy to a Bullfighter

*Oh, he was a gay bullfighter!
 Air's light, but his head was lighter.
 He wanted to be the best, so you see
 No more of this gay bullfighter.
 'Cause one day the bull got madder
 While the bullfighter's family grew sadder.
 To the fighter's bad luck, he forgot how to duck—
 Now he's climbing the "golden ladder."*

ARLEEN HESEL.

Ambition

*A little fellow in a bright red sweater
Looking very like a plump gay cardinal
Pulled yellow flowers from the lawn,
Pressing them close to him with one chubby hand,
The other outstretched to balance him on his unsteady feet.*

*He hummed contentedly to himself
Queer baby tunes snatched from a vaguely remembered heaven,
Until he saw some great flame blooms
Dip swayingly above him,
Futilely he snatched at them time after time,
His once treasured dandelions trampled on—Forgotten.*

MOLLY HARDY.

Elegy to a City Mouse

*His is a tale oft told and stale,
Lacking the touch of romance.
'Twas not that he died for love or pride—
He died for sustenance.*

*Oh poets, sing of the fateful thing
That ended his short life's span!
The cause of his doom:—he dared presume
To live in a house with man!*

MOLLY HARDY.

Mexico, We Salute You

*Fighting great odds, battling your best
With leaders of grit, you passed the test:
Were you to be a nation free,
Or subject now to Spain's decree?
You showed the world the path you chose,
As onward now your nation goes.
Mexico, we salute you!*

*Cortez, the Spanish conqueror bold
Subdued the Aztecs for their gold.
Many a war was waged in your land,
In everyone you took your stand.
Foreign nations fought for you
Just for wealth—a shame! but true.
Mexico, we salute you!*

*Now you seem to be secure,
You've held your magical allure.
We hope you rise forevermore
And open to us your friendly door.
Your name will mean to all the world
Honor and strength. Your flag unfurled—
Mexico, we salute you.*

SCHOOL LIFE

Mr. Richard Priess

Mr. Richard Priess was born in Michigan, July 17, 1880. He spent his youth among the Saginaw, Shawassee and Titebewassee Indian tribes in that state. He entered grammar school at the age of five, and preparatory school at the age of twelve. At the age of twenty-one he entered Concordia Seminary, and later received his M. A. degree in languages from Washington University. He taught at Walther College for four years, and at Sordan High School for eight years, coming to Cleveland in January, 1920.

In January, 1924, he became co-sponsor of The Beacon, which at that time was a semi-annual publication. During the eight years he was connected with it, twelve issues were published—all excellent examples of high school annuals, and many of them winners of prizes in contests. To his creative mind much of the credit for their success must be given. While here, he was also sponsor of the German, the Pep, the Camera, the Skating, the Chess, and the Golf Clubs. His kindly advice and help will be missed by all, and his position a difficult one to fill.

His code of beliefs, as given to an Orange and Blue correspondent several years ago, was:

"I believe a teacher should like all boys and girls.

"I believe one should have multitudinous interests in life.

"I believe an educated man to be one who knows at least one subject thoroughly."

He is survived by Mrs. Priess; Harold, who graduated from Cleveland in June, 1921; and Althea, now Mrs. Theodore Strawn of Florida, of the class of January, 1926.

In the death of Mr. Priess Cleveland High School has lost an optimist, a lover of life and beauty, a kind friend, and an inspiring teacher.

MEMORIAL ASSOCIATION

The Beacon

The publication of this edition marks the fourth Annual Beacon by the students of Grover Cleveland High School.

The staff has endeavored to improve The Beacon by enlarging the school life and interscholastic athletic sections.

The theme for this year's publication is "Mexico" and we have carried out this idea throughout the whole production.

We offer the Beacon, sincerely hoping that our efforts meet with your approval. The staff wishes to take this opportunity to express its appreciation to all who have assisted in making this issue a success. We are especially grateful to Miss Fitch and her art classes, to Miss Brown for her literary assistance, to Miss Wilhelmi for her assistance in the poetry, to the Orange and Blue, which has given this issue its publicity, and to the Advertising Department of the Missouri Pacific Lines.

The business staff wishes to thank the advertisers whose financial assistance has made this issue possible. The solicitors, who secured the advertising, are to be commended for the interest they have shown.

Almost all of the illustrations and decorations appearing in this Beacon were made by the sixth-and-seventh term Art Class of the fall of 1931.

Among the ruins of architecture of the ancient races in Mexico, there were found many decorative borders, geometric patterns and surface designs, painted and sculptured in relief on stone surfaces of buildings. Pictures with examples of these were found in a number of books, photographs and clippings, from the Public Library, from the Mexican Consulate and in material brought by the students themselves. Mayan and Aztec art was new to all the class and much preliminary work and study of it was necessary. Then adaptations and original designs having the same characteristics were made. The subtitle and page heading were designed to look like some of the ancient inscriptions. The contrast of ancient with modern Mexico is suggested on the division pages where the rectangles show scenes of the life of today. Most of these are original compositions and some are renderings from photographs, etc., and for all of them there was source material such as could be found.

The lady with the doll, the figure with what looks like a bat, the gods, and the calendar stone are all authentic.

The class enjoyed working on this problem and learned much of interest about the religions, arts and customs of Mexico, old and new.

The large half-tones are from photographs lent us by the Missouri Pacific Lines.

The informal pictures of students and faculty were made by Karl Holderle and Bill Polster, and Victor Rahmoeller arranged them for the pages.

The Orange and Blue

The Orange and Blue Staff has endeavored to fulfill the expectations of its supporters by producing a publication worthy of Cleveland. We have striven for a paper containing the utmost in support of school activities and publication of home news.

Appreciation is extended to the host of students who gave their literary efforts and to the subscribers, without whom the Orange and Blue could not have been successful. In spite of hard times, and many other difficulties the spirit of Cleveland High School has triumphed and a paper worthy of that ideal has been produced. Onward, Cleveland!

Do You Remember?

December Nineteenth

Oh, shoot it! The Cleveland Basketball Team lost the first league game of the season to Beaumont 27-10

January Ninth

The Senior Class Day program was presented in the auditorium. And was it good? I ask you!

January Ninth

"Yea Orange—, Yea, Blue—!" The Cleveland Basketball Team defeated Central 40-21 in the second game of the season.

January Sixteenth

And now? We're tied with Roosevelt for third place in the league after losing to Soldan by a score of 28-14.

January Twentieth

Cleveland opened with a bang! A record enrollment! Approximately 2750 students will use the halls of Cleveland this term. Hm-m-m!

January Twenty-third

Too bad. The Roosevelt five defeated the Cleveland Basketball squad 27-17, at the St. Louis University Gymnasium.

January Twentieth

"Bye Bye Blues." The Seniors graduated in the auditorium this evening during a very interesting program.

February Fifth

Cleveland defeated Beaumont for the second time this season in basketball, the score being 15-13. Beaumont's numerous fouls lost the game for them.

February Sixth

The Orange and Blue drive for subscriptions began today. We need 2,100 subscribers and all students are requested to take their school paper.

February Eighteenth

The Cleveland teachers organized a Bowling Club. It is composed of about ten members of the Cleveland faculty.

February Twentieth

Soldan defeated Cleveland 17-15 and is assured of at least a tie for the city championship.

February Twenty-first

Bill Swindler was elected President of the Honor Society to succeed Colbert Lais.

February Twenty-Sixth

The Senior play try out was held Thursday after school in room 305. Poems and monologues were given to the pupils to learn.

February Twenty-seventh

Cleveland lost the final game of the basketball season to Roosevelt by the score of 26-15. Beaumont and Soldan ended in a tie for the city championship.

February Twenty-eighth

Paul Terwesten was elected president of the New Senior class at their last meeting.

March First

There are thirty-seven tryouts for the Senior play still remaining. The total number to start with was seventy.

March Sixth

The Senior gave the New Senior class a party at 2.15 in the girls' gym. Dancing began immediately after the refreshments had been served.

March Seventh

The Student Council of Cleveland High School adopted a parking rule. "Hereafter there shall be no parking on the east side of Louisiana on the 4300 block." This has been done to avoid the constant traffic jam after school.

March Thirteenth

The Freshmen Party was held at 2:30 Friday. The party turned out to be a big success, and everybody had a good time.

March Twentieth

Cleveland's affirmative won its debate with Roosevelt at Cleveland. The votes of the judges were all in favor of the Cleveland team. The negative team lost to the Central team at Central two votes to one vote.

March Twenty-second

Cleveland took one-fourth of the space in the last week's School Times. This is more than eight times the space given to Cleveland. Keep up the good work.

March Twenty-fourth

The Anna H. Shaw members gave a party after school for the Webster-Hayne Debating Club and the Debating Forum.

March Twenty-fourth

Cleveland finally got the cast arranged for the Senior play. The name of the play is "A Lucky Break." It is sure to go over with a bang, with such talented pupils in the cast.

March Twenty-fifth

Billy Watts was elected president of Thrift Representatives, and Ruth Gall is secretary.

April Fourth

Well, well, well! The Cleveland Baseball Team won the opening game of the season from Soldan 7-1. The Orange and Blue Nine believe that "the early bird gets the worm."

1922-23 SEASON

April Eleventh

Hurrah! Three cheers for the Orange and Blue! They defeated Central 18-12. Cleveland's leading the league with two victories and no defeats.

April Twenty-fourth

Gee, it was great! Any Senior or New-Senior who missed the New-Senior-Senior party certainly missed an enjoyable afternoon.

April Twenty-fourth

Another trophy for Cleveland! Elizabeth Anthes, by placing first in the Oratorical Contest sponsored by Washington U. brought the girls' trophy to Cleveland (permanently). Walter Weaver, Cleveland's other representative, placed second in the boys' division.

April Twenty-eighth

The Cleveland Nine retained their league lead by defeating Beaumont in an easy game at the stadium.

May First

The Senior play "A Lucky Break" was splendidly presented to an appreciative audience of an odd twenty-five hundred.

May Second

"The score, oh, the score!" Cleveland won their fourth game out of that many played when the Orange and Blue Nine defeated Beaumont by a score of 8-2.

May Fourteenth

The Cleveland Nine lost their first game of the season to Roosevelt 9-6. But we still hold first place.

May Fifteenth

Girls, girls, everywhere! Well, it was the girls' field meet, "Play Day," and it was a huge success. Some five hundred girls participated in the various events.

May Sixteenth

And then—we lost the second game and dropped to second place as a result. The Beaumont team defeated Cleveland 10-3.

May Eighteenth

Cleveland was well represented by the Orchestra, Band, and Glee Club in the High School Concert at the Washington University Field House.

May Twenty-second

Cleveland placed second in the annual track meet at the Public School Stadium, Roosevelt placing first. There was a large crowd and "lotta noise."

May Twenty-sixth

The Honor Society Induction was held in the auditorium this evening. Twelve Seniors and fourteen New-Seniors were inducted during a very interesting program.

May Twenty-ninth

The Senior Excursion was held on the Steamer St. Paul as a finishing touch to Class Day. And was it a success—well, you remember.

INDOORS AND OUT

June Eleventh

Goodbye and good luck, Seniors. The Seniors graduated in the auditorium with much pomp and ceremony.

June Twenty-fourth

"Roll on, Mississippi, Roll on!" You haven't forgotten that Alumni Excursion, the excursion of excursions!

June Thirtieth

A celebrity among the ranks of the Clevelandites. Joe Ehrhardt gained the title of "International Model Airplane Champion" by winning the Wakefield trophy at the National Model Airplane Meet held at Dayton, Ohio.

August

Another celebrity! Ahem! Vincent Tiefenbrunn, a Clevelandite, became National Rifle Champion when he won the Crowell Trophy at Camp Perry this summer. The trophy will remain in his possession for one year.

September Eighth

School opened with a bang. Everybody was meeting all their old friends and teachers and having a very good time of it all.

September Eleventh

The Student Council held its first meeting of the term, no business was transacted, the meeting being principally for the acquaintance of new members.

September Twelfth

Coach Fenenga has the football work going full blast. The players are getting into shape very fast and the coach expects to have a good team on the field this year.

September Fifteenth

Mr. Moody and Mr. Deming want fifty debaters to try out for the coming debating season.

September Twenty-fifth

The first Senior meeting was held Friday in room 300 for the election of temporary chairman and secretary.

September Twenty-seventh

The Honor Society elected their officers for this term. Victor Rahmoeller was the new President.

September Twenty-ninth

The Beacon began its drive for ads today. They need 1400 dollars worth of ads, and it is up to the students to get them.

October First

Cleveland won its first football game of the season by defeating McBride 27-6.

October Second

The Girls' Debating Forum held its first meeting of the season in Portable 8.

Boys' Debating

On Friday night, March 20, 1931, the Cleveland debaters had an opportunity of regaining the prized Princeton Cup as a permanent possession. The question debated was, "Resolved, That the chain store system is more beneficial than detrimental to the best interests of the American public." The age old feud with Roosevelt was revived by the affirmative team at Cleveland. The negative team met Central's affirmative team at Central. But Cleveland defeated Roosevelt by a unanimous decision, and was in turn defeated by Central by a 2-1 decision. Central and Soldan both won two debates, so another debate was necessary to break the tie. Central emerged victorious and was given a leg on the Princeton Cup. The Cleveland teams were:

Affirmative

First . . . . .	William Swindler
Second . . . . .	Everett Storey
Third . . . . .	Robert Gotch
Alternate . . . . .	Bill Watts

Negative

First . . . . .	George Fremon
Second . . . . .	Carleton Wilkinson
Third . . . . .	Albert O'Brien
Alternate . . . . .	Howard Etling

Oratorical Contest

The representatives of Cleveland, Elizabeth Anthes and Walter Weaver, won first and second places respectively at the Washington U Memorial Chapel at the oratorical contest, held in 1931.

Elizabeth's oration was entitled "The Man and The Machine," based upon the displacement of man power by modern labor saving devices.

Walter's oration was a biographical oration on Samuel Gompers entitled "Labor's Statesman" portraying his life and accomplishments for the cause of organized labor.

We congratulate Elizabeth and Walter on their success.

Manager Kermit Winter, Captain Dan Cabbage.

Bob Scanlin, Bill Kilpatrick, Gene Poteet, Norman Uffman, Louis Hesse,
W. Carl Huns, Delbert Schwanke, Walter Gog, Hugh Reed, Lester Pieper, Otto Harber, Jack Beget, Earl Hahn, Mgr. John King, Ralph Bentzinger.

Football

The opening of the 1931 football season saw three lettermen back from last year, Dan Cabbage, Walter Gog, and Hugh Reed. Very promising material was found in Earl Hahn, Gene Poteet, Norman Uffman, Wilbur Hans, and others. Prior to the opening of the High School schedule, Cleveland was defeated 19-6 by C. B. C., which won the championship of the Prep League. Cleveland won its first game of the season when it met and defeated McBride 27-6. Cleveland met the Mission, Cadets the following week and played to a scoreless tie. The game was featured by great defensive play.

Cleveland vs. Roosevelt

Cleveland's first league game against Roosevelt scattered Cleveland's title hopes. In the opening quarter after a few minutes of play the enemy's backs brought the ball almost to the goal line. Connors then went over for a touchdown. They failed to add the extra point. Toward the close of the first period a twenty-five yard pass gave Roosevelt its second touchdown. The try for extra point again failed. At the opening of the second half Earl Hahn, Cleveland's speedy back, became active. After making twenty-four yards in two plays, he went over for a touchdown. The try for extra point failed. The final score was made by Roosevelt in the last quarter and the extra point was made. Final score: Roosevelt 19: Cleveland 6.

Cleveland vs. Central

An inspired Cleveland football team gained a victory for Cleveland the following week. In the first half Jouret, Central's center, broke through, blocked Earl Hahn's attempt to punt, grabbed the ball, ran 20 yards for a touchdown, and then dropkicked the extra point.

In the second half Cleveland woke up. After the kickoff, Cleveland drove 51 yards for a touchdown, Earl Hahn going over. During the last quarter Cleveland scored three more touchdowns due to the long and steady runs of Earl Hahn and Norman Uffman. Gene Poteet added an extra point making the final score: Cleveland 26: Central 7.

Cleveland vs. Soldan

Eight thousand young people saw Soldan send Cleveland down in defeat. Nothing of much importance happened in the first quarter, but in the second quarter the story was told. Minkey, Soldan's back, passed the ball to Hudson, who sprinted the remaining 43 yards for the touchdown. Ullmann was at the heels of Hudson and when Hudson reached the five yard strip "Tuffy" Ullman dove for Hudson's legs, but just touched his heels. Hudson was sent sprawling, but it was good for a touchdown. The extra point was made. Cleveland threatened in the last moments of the second period when Kock intercepted a Soldan pass and ran 63 yards to Soldan's 18 yard line. Before the next play could be made the gong barked and the half was over. We failed to score in the last half, and the score remained: Soldan 7; Cleveland 0.

Cleveland vs. Beaumont

Cleveland ended its 1931 football schedule by crushing Beaumont under a 13-0 score. The first score came in the first period when Captain Cabbage intercepted a Beaumont pass and raced 65 yards through a broken field for a touch-down. Gene Poteet added the extra point on a drop-kick. In the last period Willard Hans went over from the 2 yard line for our second touch down of the game. The try for extra point was blocked. The referee's whistle ended the game a few minutes later with the final score: Cleveland 13; Beaumont 0.

The championship was decided in the second contest of the day when Roosevelt defeated Soldan 8-2. All scores were gotten as the result of blocked points. This victory would have given Roosevelt permanent possession of the Yale Bowl, but because of the ineligibility of "Red" Shannon, Roosevelt's star back, Roosevelt had to delinquent their claim on the Yale Bowl. Soldan was to receive the Yale Bowl then, but they displayed their sportsmanship by leaving it in league competition for another year.

Captain Cabbage and Earl Hahn made "The All Star Football Team." Jack Beger, Pieper and Poteet made the "Second All Star Team." We congratulate them on their success.

Basketball

IRVING FISCHER
Manager

When Cleveland, after winning last year's district championship, met Beaumont in the first league game of the 1930-31 basketball season, we had three regulars from the previous year: Ralph and Ray Landry, forwards; and Roy Paglusch, a guard. The other players who constituted the first team were Bob Wilfert, Clarence Pohrer, Edgar Vogt, Albert Mickley, Harry Vierheller, Mel Ringwald, Russell Scherer, and John Gresowski. But the strong Beaumont team out-scored Cleveland 27-10.

Our first victory came when we kalsomined Central 40-21. This victory enabled us to advance into third place in the League standings.

Our second setback came from our South Side rivals, Roosevelt, when they defeated us 27-17.

Two weeks later Cleveland upset all plans by defeating Beaumont, which was tied for the lead with Soldan, 15-13. Bob Wilfert scored a sensational one-hand shot to win the game. This victory enabled Cleveland to remain a contender for the championship.

The next week Central upset everything by defeating Cleveland, 30-19. Captain Ralph Landry was high point man, with eight points.

Soldan assured itself of at least a tie for the City Championship the following week by defeating Cleveland in the last twenty seconds by a score of 17-15.

In our final game of the season we were again defeated by Roosevelt, 26-15.

In the district tournament, Cleveland was defeated by Maplewood, 29-24, while Soldan defeated McBride for the District championship.

Freshman Basketball

The Freshman basketball squad of 1930-31 had a fairly good season. They won ten games while losing six for a winning percentage of .625. The following is the line-up of the Freshman team:

March 6.	Cleveland Frosh, 23; St. Matthews, 4;
March 18.	Cleveland Frosh, 16; McKinley, 12.

Baseball

For the fifth consecutive year Coach Bert Fenenga placed a baseball team on the field that threatened the leaders and proved itself a combination that could work together.

Cleveland opened its season on April 4 by a crushing victory over Solvan. The score was 7 to 1. Cleveland started hostilities in the third inning when Gene Poteet, star centerfielder, hit a home run with two mates on base. This was enough to beat Soldan as the fine pitching of Wilfert and Benecke held Soldan to one run.

Cleveland's second straight win was at the expense of Central. The game seemed like a football game, with a score of 18 to 12. The Cleveland aggregation amassed twenty-two hits and eighteen runs. Wilfert pitched eight innings and struck out ten men.

Cleveland's third straight victory was at Beaumont's expense. The final score was 7 to 1. Wilfert allowed twelve hits, but he was effective in the pinches and held Beaumont scoreless until the ninth inning.

A victory over Soldan gave Cleveland its fourth straight winning. With the score tied in the seventh inning, pitcher Bob Wilfert hit a home run with two mates on base, winning his own game. The final count was 9 to 6.

Cleveland's first defeat came at the next game at the hands of our South Side Rivals, named Roosevelt. Cleveland took the lead in the third inning by scoring five runs. Roosevelt steadily crawled up until they tied the score. They added three more runs in the eighth for their margin of victory. The tragic score was 9 to 6.

Cleveland was knocked out of first place as a result of the unexpected defeat handed us by Beaumont. Cleveland's six errors were largely responsible for the defeat. Howard Gray, Beaumont's pitcher, struck out fourteen Cleveland batsmen. The final score was 10 to 3.

Roosevelt clinched the championship on May 23 with its victory over Cleveland. In the fifth inning Roosevelt garnered six runs, enough to win, with a final score of 13 to 5.

Cleveland closed its baseball season by defeating Central, 12 to 8. This victory enabled Cleveland to finish second in the High School race.

The Track Team

The Track Team is under the direction of Mr. Tredinnick, Mr. White, and Mr. Singer. There were about 55 members on the 1931 track team. The boys engage in various events ranging from the 100 yard dash to the shot put. In the 1931 track meet Cleveland placed second, Roosevelt winning.

The Track Team is divided into three divisions, Seniors, Juniors, and Midgets. The boys are arranged in these classes according to age, not height.

The captain of the Senior Track Team was Vincent Blaylock, the Junior captain was Earl Gammels, and the Midget captain was Robert Elder.

Tennis

The tennis squad composed of Oliver Fischer, Al Wamser, both letterman, Bob Mignerone, Charles Seeger, Fischel Rosenthal, Bob Voerster, Bob Heritage, Albert Trett and John Ruwwe, represented Cleveland this year in the Interscholastic Tennis Matches with the other four High Schools. Of the sixteen matches played, the Cleveland team emerged with ten victories. These ten victories put Cleveland second with a percentage of .625. This team has been the first in sixteen years to place as high as second. The results.

Junior Pipes was organized September, 1931, as a dancing club for Freshman girls only. There are fifty girls enrolled and they are learning clog and folk dances of different countries. If this club keeps expanding each term, Cleveland High will present some excellent dancers.

Senior Pipes o'Pan

Miss Gunther

Pipes O'Pan, Cleveland's dancing club, is one of the most popular clubs at Cleveland as is shown by its membership. It is not necessary to be a good dancer to join Pipes O' Pan, as the purpose of the club is to give every girl an opportunity to learn dancing, to obtain healthful and enjoyable exercise and to acquire grace and poise. All girls interested in dancing who are in their third term or above are eligible for membership.

The Crowell Trophy Winner

The high point in the ten years of the existence of the Cleveland High School Rifle Club was reached when one of its members, Vincent Tiefenbrunn, won the Crowell Trophy at Camp Perry during the National Rifle Matches in September. He was victorious in a field of 1,255 of the leading marksmen of the United States, taking first place over the best shooters in the Army, Navy, Marines, National Guard, and Civilians. The fact that such distinction was won by an eighteen year old high school boy would indicate perfect coordination of the eye and nerves and also remarkable perseverance and patience.

Tiefenbrunn entered Cleveland High School in September, 1928, and joined the Rifle Club as soon as he had a chance. He stayed out of school during the year 1929-30, but returned in September, 1930, and now plans to finish high school and go to college, probably to West Point. A complete record of his accomplishments in shooting would take more space than is available in this article. Briefly he has obtained more honors than any other Cleveland Rifleman, and probably more than any other shooter of his age in the United States.

In winning the Crowell Match which consisted of ten shots at 600 yards in the prone position, his score was perfect. He and fourteen other shooters fired ten consecutive bulls-eyes, but "Tief" had nine "V's," and only one shot near the edge of the bulls-eye. As a result of winning the match, he now has possession of the Crowell Trophy, a Gold Medal, and a worthwhile purse.

All those interested in this remarkable young shooter, join in wishing him continued success in the excellent sport of Rifle Marksmanship.

Edenart Covers

Lend themselves to a wide variety of unusual but effective book designs. . . .

The neat designs, fine graining, deep embossing and harmonious blending of colors satisfy the most exacting tastes for beauty.

The durability, unfading coloring, ineradicable embossing assure a permanent product. Covers can withstand rough handling. Dirt, dust, grit, grime and other soiling elements will not mar the beauty of "EDENART" as they are excluded by the lacquer finish which also renders the covers easily washable.

Richness of finish and quality increase the value of books without adding to cost.

Uniqueness and highly attractive features strongly appeal where variety is desired. Adaptable for a thousand uses other than as book designs.

UNIVERSITY TRAINING FOR BUSINESS —

The 1932 high school graduate has the unusual opportunity to establish his future by means of the sound, professional business training of the School of Commerce and Finance, St. Louis University — 10 years with the splendid facilities of a fine, new, modern Commerce Building, on Lindell, between Grand and Spring.

Day and evening courses afford a broad understanding of business affairs and a specialized training in accounting, economics, finance, management, marketing and merchandising.

The student's instruction—under experienced teachers—will now receive the stimulus of the modern laboratories, enlarged libraries, spacious class rooms, comfortable club room, etc., of the School's new building.

Class Jewelry of Class . . .

Leadership always rests with someone. There is always one outstanding whether in the class room, in society, or the commercial world. In the creation of class sorority and fraternity pins and rings, and fraternal jewelry, the name COLLEGE SHOP has always meant leadership . . . creators of class jewelry of class

The choice of the College Shop to produce the 1932 class ring for the Cleveland High School is appreciated as a tribute to the style, quality and beauty of our rings.

TARDY

A certain country minister posted this notice on the church door:

"Brother Smith departed for heaven at 4:30 a. m."

The next day he found written below: "Heaven, 9:00 a. m. Smith not in yet. Great anxiety."

Wife (at 2 a. m.): "Wake up, John, wake up! There's a burglar in the next room."

Husband (sleepily): "Well, I've no revolver. You go in and look daggers at him."

READY

I believe in today and the work I am doing, in tomorrow and the work I hope to do, and in the sure reward which the future holds. I believe in courtesy, in kindness, in generosity, in good cheer, in friendship and in honest competition. I believe there is something doing, somewhere, for every man ready to do it. I believe I'm ready—right now! — Elbert Hubbard.

ENGLISH PROVERBS

Better a diamond with a flaw than a pebble without one.

Idle folk have the least leisure.

None think the great unhappy but the great.

Let him who would be ill-served keep plenty of servants.

All women are good for something or good for nothing.

Although it rain, throw not away thy watering-pot.

A hedge between keeps friendship green.

A growing youth has a wolf in his stomach.

Better a slip with the foot than with the tongue.

He that's unwilling to go to his bed is unwilling to get out of it.

A full purse makes the mouth run over.

ARABIAN PROVERBS

Think of the going-out before you enter.

It may be a fire; on the morrow it will be ashes.

Throw not a stone into a well from which thou drinkest.

The remedy against bad times is to be patient with them.

When you are an anvil, be patient; when a hammer, strike.

Where the mind inclines, the feet lead.

The chameleon does not leave one tree until he is sure of another.

The servant, deceived by the cold of the morning, provided no water for the heat of the day.

If thou canst not take things by the head, then take them by the tail.

If they had not dragged me from under him I should have killed him.

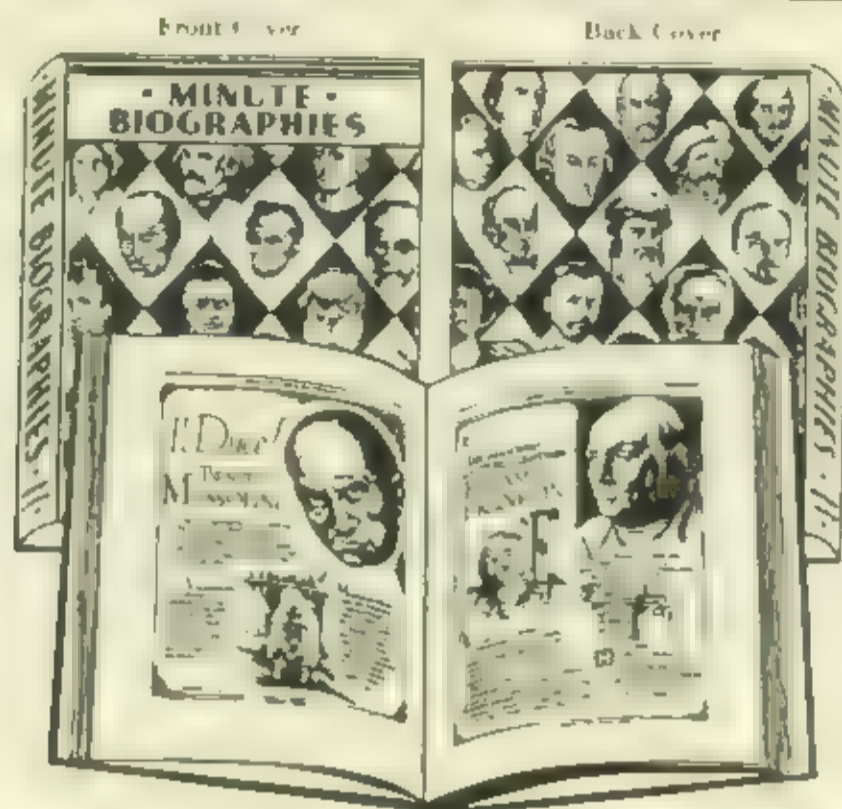

Of little use to hammer cold iron.

Four things cannot be brought back: a word spoken, an arrow discharged, the Divine decree, and past time.

INTIMATE GLIMPSES INTO THE LIVES OF 150
GREAT MEN AND WOMEN. 150 ILLUSTRATIONS

Nothing like this book has ever been published before. Each page bears the authentic portrait and from 100 to 300 words of text, acquainting the reader with the important and interesting events in the life of a famous man or woman.

In a single minute—that's how the book gets its name—the boy or girl or the adult has summed up for him or her the career of some one whose life has left an indelible impression upon the history of the world.
